Addo Elephant National Park

It currently ranks third in size after Kruger National Park and the Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park. It was proclaimed in 1931 and today is the only park in the world to host the "Big 7" (Elephant, Buffalo, Rhino, Lion, Leopard, Whale, and Great White Shark). Addo is the best place to get up close and personal with the biggest land mammal – the park is home to over 700 elephants, the densest population in the world. Other mammals include Hyaena, Zebra, Jackal, Warthog, Suricate, and numerous species of Antelope. Over 300 bird species have been recorded in Addo and there are around 600 different plant species. Addo is also home to the endangered dung beetle. Whether you experience the park from the comfort of your own vehicle or on a game drive, the chances are you will have close encounters with the elephant

Please note that when entering Addo Elephant National Park (and all other National Parks in South Africa) you will be required to produce an identity document (passport, ID card or driver's license) To make the most of the park, bring binoculars, camera, walking shoes and wildlife reference books.
