It currently ranks third in size after Kruger National Park and the Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park. It was proclaimed in 1931 and today is the only park in the world to host the "Big 7" (Elephant, Buffalo, Rhino, Lion, Leopard, Whale, and Great White Shark). Other mammals include Hyaena, Zebra, Jackal, Warthog, Suricate, and numerous species of Antelope. Over 300 bird species have been recorded in Addo and there are around 600 different plant species. PENGUIN ISLAND CRUISE RAGGY CHARTERS

Discover the marine life of Algoa Bay off Port Elizabeth, one of South Africa's most diverse bays and the dolphin capital of the world. Bryde's whales, bottlenose and humpback dolphins can be seen almost all year round. Southern right whales visit every year between June and December to give birth to their calves and mate while humpback whales pass through during their annual migration. Hundreds of common dolphins often come into the bay to feed. Add to this the Cape fur seal, several shark and seabird species, as well as a visit to St Croix Island Reserve to see the largest breeding colony of the endangered African Penguin. St Croix is home to 3000 African penguins and is a very important breeding colony situated in a Marine Protected Area. It is here where you will get a close-up encounter with these comical birds. The African penguin's breeding season reaches its peak between March and May, when you may be able to see the chicks from the boat. As well as African penguins, both St. Croix and Brenton Island are inhabited by the endangered African black oystercatcher, white-breasted cormorants and Cape cormorants. The St. Croix Island group, along with the Bird Island group, became part of the Addo Elephant National Park, allowing rangers to patrol the islands in aid of conservation efforts to protect the African penguin population. As they are Marine Protected Areas, please note that you are not allowed to actually go on to the islands.
